

Georgia Allen was born in Chicago, IL, but raised and lives in Madison, WI with daughter Ázaryah. She has many social impact entrepreneur roles as the Co-Founder of Soaring Independent Cooperative, a worker-owned home care agency and a startup for the family childcare cooperative incubator in Madison, WI. During the day she works as a Community Engagement Manager at The Road Home Dane County and volunteers as the board of director for 2 local boards.

Her professional and volunteer roles reflect my passion to contribute to solutions/initiatives that promote thriving communities by enhancing pathways to economic stability and breaking generational poverty cycles.

The confluence of her experiences allows her to recognize and respect the range of factors that inform an individual's/ group's values. This ignited her calling to assiduously assist state/local, nonprofit organizations, businesses to enhance resource flows that promote economic security to nurture communities lacking opportunities to achieve and maintain middle class status.
