2139	118th	Weber (TX)	Structured	R	1112	Legislation is needed to terminate the endless process of review and delay by the U.S. Maritime Administration in issuing licenses for deepwater port projects that have met important qualifying criteria under the Deepwater Port Act. In these cases, applicants have met all of the critical Deepwater Port criteria and yet MARAD has failed to issue a license within the 365-day statutory deadline. In fact, some of these projects have been pending for more than one year after a Record of Decision was issued and a Supplemental Environmental Assessment was issued. For no other reason than to require this agency to comply with existing law, certain DWP projects deserve to be legislatively approved. These projects involve the export of LNG. Moreover, the volume of LNG to be exported falls inside the 48 billion cubic feet per day (Bcf/d) volume cap on LNG exports already approved by the Administration, a point made by Energy Secretary Jennifer Granholm herself. And importantly, she added that these exports are not projects subject to the LNG export "pause." The pause, therefore, is no basis for MARAD to indefinitely postpone approval of these project license applications.
